NetEDI helps NHS Supply Chain move their suppliers to PEPPOL

NHS Supply Chain manage the sourcing, delivery and supply of health care items. They are responsible for the wide range of products that are found in hospitals, everything from food, right through to larger items, like MRI scanners.

One Integrated Platform

Around one and a half billion pounds worth of transactions go through NHS Supply Chain's systems each year.

They have 800 suppliers which means that, before they implemented PEPPOL, they had multiple different ways of placing orders and receiving invoices.

To resolve these issues, NHS SC needed to move their suppliers onto an integrated platform known as PEPPOL.

They chose NetEDI to assist with the integration and we are now the UK's number one PEPPOL provider for the NHS and its suppliers.

"Everything is going well with NetEDI. We have a very good relationship and a collaborative approach."

Steve Moore, NHS Supply Chain

Our Work with NHS Supply Chain

We have been working hard contacting NHS Trusts and suppliers to make sure they are aware of the new rules surrounding how they trade and what their options are for implementing PEPPOL.

Steve Moore, Supply Chain Systems Manager at NHS Supply Chain, says, 'NetEDI use their onboarding team to communicate with our supplier base. They manage all the testing for us and basically manage everything for us from start to finish.'

'Not only are we using NetEDI for our mandatory messages, but we've also implemented some additional PEPPOL messages as well that allow our suppliers to do more things electronically, rather than through manual intervention. This helps with things like speedier invoice payment and fewer invoice mismatches.'

The Benefits of PEPPOL

The NHS will benefit from having single order types and fewer bespoke interfaces. This will then free up money which will be put back into patient care and the NHS.

Suppliers will benefit from PEPPOL as they will be able to keep trading with the NHS and they should see a reduction in the number of invoice queries going forward.

If you're an NHS supplier, make sure you're PEPPOL ready by getting in touch with one of our experts today.
